

"My good people of the United States of America, you all know why we gather here today. It is because of the circumstances of our nation, divided by disagreements and torn apart by warfare. Warfare is not the solution, for it only triggers more and more hatred. Warfare will never end until one side is totally destroyed, and that will, in turn destroy our country. Why fight when this matter could be talked over and solved peacefully in a diplomatic way? Why should there be bloodshed when there need not be? Our brave men and women fight for whichever cause they believe is right, but why sacrifice lives to do so? Most importantly, why should we fight when we are all of one country, and of one people? We are all brothers and sisters of one another and must love one another instead of hating. Remember Martin Luther King Jr.'s famous speech "I have a dream"? In that speech, he describes how love is much more powerful than hate. The only way to stop hate is to love. We have sailed across the oceans and settled here on this land, because we believed our lives would be improved. We depend on each other for survival! To succeed, we must resolve our disputes peacefully instead of violently. Resolving matters peacefully will bring out the true strength in our nation, for only the strong have the courage to resolve in peace. We must all work together and become one; for only if united we may conquer. Only if united we may grow stronger, and become a mightier nation. My friends, I need your help in order to end this awful war, and to reunite our country. Only if united we may truly live up to our name: The United States of America."
