

We are the sons and daughters, blacks and whites, Jews and Gentiles, Republicans and Democrats of a country, a country that is divided. We are the people under one flag, one God, and one constitution. We, as a country, must unite today or forever forget Old Glory.

We are one underneath the Stars and Stripes. We must remember where we came from and the country at its youngest. We must value what our fore fathers gave us. America must hold onto its life, its freedom, and its unity. Each day, we are reminded of these things by the sight of the Washington Monument peering out atop of our nation's capital.

We, the children, are the future. The future the founding fathers gave us, we must not divide, we must not destroy, we must not discriminate. The new President, whomever may it be, will guide us like a light through the darkness of separation in our country. Our courageous, hopeful, and brave ancestors set out to build a new country and we must not destroy what they have made. We must become courageous, hopeful, and brave, as our ancestors were, to pull this country together.

"All men are created equal." We must stand by and believe in what is inscribed into our country's history. Our country has been divided. We are the sons and daughters under one nation. We are the family of the United States and we must learn to live and love like brothers and sisters or forever forget our history.

We are broken, but not yet demolished. We are divided, but not yet separated. Lincoln renewed our unity and we, a nation, must do the same. We must honor our nation's history of freedom, unity, and prosperity and become one under the Stars and Stripes.

Kate Pond
Cisne, Illinois